VICTIM OFFENDER MEDIATION ASSOCIATION

19th Annual
International Training Institute & Conference

September 23-27, 2002

The mission of VOMA is “promoting and enhancing restorative justice dialogue, principles, and practices.” Our mission will be achieved only with a commitment to full diversity and equality of participation for all people.
Greetings!

On behalf of the VOMA Board, we cordially invite you to attend VOMA’s 19th Annual International Training Institute and Conference. This event continues the tradition of VOMA and its members as leaders in the field of Victim Offender Mediation and Restorative Justice dialogue and practice.

This year’s trainings and workshops will be challenging, exciting, and bring you the “cutting edge” ideas in the field. You’ll have the opportunity to network with people from around the world committed to Restorative Justice and Peacemaking and participate in discussion and dialogue on those issues of importance and interest to you.

The Training Institute and Conference offers a wide range of trainings and workshops allowing you to explore various issues and follow particular themes. Highlights include:

♦ In-depth training in Victim Offender Mediation and Basic Conferencing
♦ “Train the Trainer” curriculum offered in collaboration between VOMA and Balanced and Restorative Justice Project (BARJ)
♦ “Developing and Managing Mediation Centers in Your Community” presented by another VOMA partner, the National Association for Community Mediation (NAFCM)
♦ Opening Plenary conference session addressing concerns raised by victim advocacy groups in both the Restorative Justice process and the criminal justice system
♦ Special theatre presentation: “A Body in Motion,” based on the work of Howard Zehr and his book Transcending: Reflections of Crime Victims
♦ Trainings and workshops exploring key themes including youth, international applications, cultural issues, and diversity
♦ Continuation of the dialogue and policy development sessions on contemporary, controversial topics such as terrorism, the death penalty, domestic violence, Hate/Bias crimes, and more

This year, we again offer a host of opportunities for participants to grow and learn. Furthermore, open space will be provided for the purpose of dialogue with VOMA Board members, our administrators from the Center for Policy, Planning, and Performance, and fellow colleagues.

VOMA’s Board, as always, is very enthusiastic and excited about the Training Institute and Conference. We look forward to seeing you in Fort Lauderdale. Please know that we appreciate the hard work our members and conference supporters put forth daily – so don’t forget to bring along your bathing suit and your smile and join us for a tremendous week with friends old and new beside the beach at the Bahia Mar!

Dear VOMA Member:

We personally invite you to attend the annual VOMA Membership Meeting Wednesday evening, September 25. The meeting has been scheduled over dinner, with VOMA underwriting the majority of the cost, in hopes of expanding your opportunity to participate and create a better forum for the exchange of information and ideas.

As VOMA moves forward with its strategic plan, it is vital that the membership plays an active role with the Board on achieving the plan’s goals and objectives. In the meeting, you may look forward to:

♦ Board presentation providing strategic plan overview and update of the Board’s progress to date
♦ Opportunity to dialogue with Board members and share ideas
♦ Meet your VOMA administrators from the Center for Policy, Planning, and Performance
♦ Hear from VOMA’s webmaster and share your ideas in dialogue
♦ Meet VOMA’s new Connections newsletter editor
♦ Learn what it means to be a member of VOMA’s Board of Directors
♦ Call for nominations for new Board members
♦ Celebrate with the Board in acknowledgement of outgoing Board members
♦ Special members’ recognition and prizes

Your Board has been working very diligently to position VOMA as a leader and innovator in the field of victim offender mediation/conferring and restorative justice. The Board recognizes that the membership is, truly, the heart, soul, and conscience of what VOMA has, over its history, aspired to stand for. Your continued participation will help guide and support the Board through its transition toward achieving VOMA’s strategic plan.

We look forward to seeing you there!

Barbara Raye, Administrator    Walter Drew Smith, Co-Chair    Sue Wiese, Co-Chair

Training Institute Sessions

Training A: Community Justice Institute (BARJ)/VOMA - Train the Trainer for Restorative Group Conferencing
This is a 6-day “Train the Trainer” program in Restorative Group Conferencing. The training will begin on Monday, September 23 and end on Saturday, September 28. If you are interested in this training, please contact the VOMA administrator for more information, at voxm@voma.org.

Training B: Developing and Managing Mediation Centers in Your Community (2 days) – NAFCM Training
This training is designed to help community mediation center directors and staff expand their skills, develop new programs, and find ways to increase their centers’ positive effects in their community. Subject areas in the Institute include: Evaluation, Center Administration, Program Development, Fund Development, Case Management and Volunteer Partnerships.

Training C: Victim Offender Mediation Basic Training (3 days) – Eric Stutzman
Please note this training ends at 5:45 pm each day.
This interactive session offers a foundation in basic victim-offender mediation. It represents the culmination of more than 20 years of Community Justice Initiatives practice in the field. The training covers restorative justice, case development, basic victim-offender mediation, benefits and risks of victim-offender mediation, and the needs of the victims and offenders. This training assumes that participants have basic conflict resolution or mediation skills training. (Please note: each participant must purchase a Victim Offender Mediation Training and Resource Manual from the presenters at $10.00 additional)

Training D: Community Justice Institute (BARJ)/VOMA - Basic Conferencing Training (3 days)
This training on Restorative Group Conferencing (aka Family Group Conferencing, Victim Offender Conferencing, etc.) will use the recent curriculum developed by a group of professional trainers and facilitators and funded originally by NIC. Several current and past VOMA Board and members were part of the design and review teams. Offered in the past in various states and by the BARJ Restorative Justice Academy, VOMA is pleased to include the training for the first time in its Training Institute.
- Can be used at various stages of the criminal justice system, e.g. police, court diversion, part of court or post court as well as in school or community settings
- Can be used to deal efficiently and promptly with a wide range of problems or illegal behavior including conflicts, bullying, disorderly conduct, assaults, thefts, robbery, burglary, property damage – from noncriminal conflict to misdemeanors to felonies
- Involves facilitated dialogue between those harmed and those who caused the harm
- Based on Restorative Justice values and principles
- Seeks to identify, repair, and prevent harm and provide meaningful support and accountability for all
Note: the Restorative Group Conferencing process is similar to VOM with a general focus on facilitating multi-party groups rather than primarily on dialogue.

Training E: Alternatives to Violence Project (3 days) – Marc Forget/Teresa Tyson/Dwayne Walker
Please note this training ends at 5:30 pm each day.
This session explores the issues that tend to make conflict more violent, and that often make its resolution so difficult. Communication and cooperation skills are improved, and sensitivity to the “other,” be it victim or offender, is enhanced. The exclusive use of participatory learning methodology provides deep learning and makes the training fun.

Training F: Mediated Dialogue in Crimes of Severe Violence (2 days) – David Doerfler/Jon Wilson/Karen Ho/Mark Umbreit/Dave Gustafson/Sandi Bergen
This training will include perspectives from several programs which focus on cases in crimes of severe violence: philosophy and goals, program development, case development, training requirements and resources, outcomes and learning experiences, similarities and differences. Participants will have opportunities to discuss key issues and questions.

Training G: Community Building Circles (1.5 days) – Jean Handley/Jerry Hampton
Community Building Circles fosters a safe place in which participants take responsibility for their thoughts and feelings while accepting the stories and behaviors of others. Respect built in the circles provides a foundation for restorative practices in which people must develop trust and capacity for attitude changes.

Training H: Offender Sensitivity (1 day) – Barb Toews/Melissa Crabbe
This training explores the offender experience and how that experience informs our restorative justice work with them. Topics will include our reactions to and stereotypes of offenders, the offender experience and journey toward accountability, working sensitively with offenders and the implications of the offenders’ experience for restorative justice work. The session will draw on the facilitators’ experience in working with offenders in a variety of capacities, including restorative justice efforts, and insight from offenders’ themselves. The content of this session will focus on adult offenders, including those who have experience with incarceration, yet is applicable to those working with adolescent offenders.
Training I: Starting a Victim Offender Mediation Program (1 day) – Mary Ellen Bowen/Linda Mix
This training highlights the essential keys and strategies in building a successful mediation program, including types of organization, types of cases, funding and development, training and community education, networking, expansion, mentoring and other issues and concerns of participants.

Training J: Racial/Cultural Issues in Mediation (1 day) – Deanna Blackman/Kathy Elton
In this training, participants will be encouraged to examine their own biases and how these may impact their role as a mediator/facilitator. What is cultural competence? How does this concept/idea impact the work done in a restorative dialogue process? What is important to know when mediating in a culturally diverse environment? This day long training will be experiential based and will guide participants through an exploration of themselves and the concept of cultural competency.

Training K: Accountability in Prison (1 day) – Bruce Kittle
This training will provide participants with an overview of the agenda and working philosophy for working in a prison setting with those who have offended on issues of victim impact and accountability. It will include a look at the results of year’s worth of an intensive victim impact training followed by regular meetings (using a circle format) with the group focusing on related issues. Can Restorative Justice principles make a long term and sustainable difference on the lives of these men and the people they have impacted? The session will also review efforts to help the men who are paroled from the group integrate back into their community, grounded in the values of Restorative Justice.

Training L: Juvenile Sexual Offenses (1 day) – Dave Fowers/Marilyn Patterson/Bart Mackay
The effects of juvenile sexual offenses leave victims and communities angry and fearful. The majority of juvenile sex offenders will return to the families and neighborhoods where their victims live. Current efforts to reintegrate offenders back into the community and to repair the harm to victims typically leave the parties isolated from each other. This training will present a model that includes all the stakeholders: victims, offenders, parents, therapists, judges, corrections and child welfare, clergy, and neighbors. Guidelines will be given to help develop dialogue that leads to a comprehensive response that includes the community as a resource for victims and offenders.

Training M: International Judicial Practice (1/2 day)
Our international presenters will compare and contrast judicial practice in their countries and the United States in the context of moving Restorative Justice principles forward on a national level.

Training N: Restorative Justice in the School Community (1/2 day) – Polly Wolner
Restorative Justice is a philosophy that, when presented in the school environment, gives the students the opportunity to take responsibility for their behaviors and classroom discipline. In its first year, the schools initiative was implemented with four school districts in Barron County, Wisconsin. The program has given classroom teachers and administrators training in dealing with conflicts by involving the victim and the school community, along with the offenders, to effect change in the whole school environment. This training will give you the model used in implementing the training sessions for school districts in your area.

Training O: Everyone Counts (1/2 day) – Bobbie Boland/Moyra Buchan
Restorative Justice and dialogue-based programs are challenged to be inclusive and to engage and be informed by people from diverse communities who often live on the margins of society. This session introduces material at the personal, societal and policy level and includes basic theory, exploration of the dynamics of inclusion and exclusion, and analysis of a concrete example of inclusion in practice.

Training P: Understanding Victimization – The Victims’ Perspective (1 day) – Sharon D’Eusanio
This training will provide participants with insight into the victim experience to better facilitate mediation. Participants will be provided with information on the dynamics of victimization, background information of the Victim Rights Movement, insight into the long and short-term consequences of violence and victimization, information on different victim populations, and how to introduce mediation to victims and victim involvement for a balanced approach. It will also explore the growth of the Victim Service Profession, victim rights legislation, and strategies for coordination and collaboration with victim service professionals.

Training Q: Domestic Violence and Victim Offender Mediation (1 day) – Alan Edwards
Through a combination of lecture, small group work, and discussions, participants will consider a restorative approach to mediating domestic violence cases. Participants will also examine some of the additional components necessary to enhancing the potential for successful encounters with and between clients.
Training R: Cross Cultural and Diversity Issues (2 days) – Sharrice Blackmon/Gregory Salters
Cross Cultural/Diversity Issues Training is designed to enhance the participants’ awareness of their own cultural influences and predispositions and how these cultural influences come into play in common interactions with others. This awareness is used to develop the participants’ understanding of issues related to human diversity: race, culture, and ethnicity.

Training S: Bullying in Schools (1/2 day) – Jane Riese
Bullying, or peer abuse, is a common phenomenon among young people in schools around the world. This workshop will define the problem, and will explore the connections between Olweus’s Bullying Prevention Model and VOM and restorative responses. Participants will explore ways to implement this research-based “blueprint” for violence prevention to assist this underserved group of victims and offenders.

Training T: Advanced Mediation Skills Training (1/2 day) – Hans Boserup
This training compares six mainstream styles of mediation: 1) Generic, 2) Settlement-driven, 3) Cognitive, systemic, 4) Transformative, 5) Humanistic, and 6) Narrative. The six styles can be regarded as reactions to one another. They rest on different value systems and different communication styles. Some of them are stage models and some of them are cycle models. Some of them focus on transactions and others focus on relations. All of them offer different grades of social control. Some of them see social control as a problem, others do not. All of them make the mediator face different kinds of dilemmas: autonomy, fairness, power balance, and security are just some of them. This training tries to be as interactive as possible.

Training U: Peacemaking and Spirituality: Touching the Soul of Restorative Justice – Mark Umbreit
This training examines the influence of spirituality upon the process of resolving interpersonal conflicts and making peace in the context of restorative justice policies and practices within communities. Whereas conflict resolution theory and practice focuses upon a problem solving model to address disputes, peacemaking engages conflict at a much deeper level. Peace-making is based on a humanistic and reformatory theory of conflict which draws heavily upon the ancient wisdom and practices of many diverse cultures throughout the world. Within the context of these traditions, true peacemaking is inseparable from spirituality, from honoring the sacred and recognizing our inter-connectedness.

Training V: Restorative Justice for Teen Courts (1/2 day) – Connie Doyle
The mission of Restorative Justice Teen Court is to help juvenile offenders restore their relationships with the community through alternative methods of sanctioning. There are programs that teach responsibility and positive decision-making as well as opportunities for community service and restitution. Barron County Restorative Court is based on the philosophy that a young first time offender deserves a second chance with the community as long as they take responsibility for making things right. It is a one-time chance to keep their public record clean. A peer jury helps determine what the constructive sanctions are, and the respondent is required to follow through within 60 days of the court hearing. Teen court is designed to interrupt patterns of criminal behavior by promoting positive feelings of self-esteem, while holding respondents directly accountable for their actions. As a participant in this training, you will understand the philosophy that drives the Restorative Teen Court as well as receive all the necessary forms for the implementation of the program in your area.

Training W: Community Empowerment: A Visioning Process (1 day) – Linda Harvey/Lisa Singh
This training highlights the unique role of community organizers in establishing relationships with prevailing systems to encourage new and developing restorative justice models such as victim/offender dialogue, victim impact panels, and community/family conferencing. The training will guide participants through a vision process to an action plan from the community organizer’s perspective.

Training X: Telling our Stories (1 day) – Luci Kelly
Here we will experience the power of story. Expect to share your own transformative experiences and get your hands dirty. From the telling of your story, move toward helping others discover their story. There will be exercises to engage the senses with different styles of learning and self-expression.

Training Y: Appreciative Inquiry: Enhancing Restorative Justice Practice and Organizing (1 day) – Phyllis Turner-Lawrence/Thom Allena
The evolving organizational and community change approach called Appreciative Inquiry (AI) has exciting restorative justice applications. AI begins with purposefully positive storytelling to bring out people’s highest aspirations, identifying what is life-affirming and leads to healing. We’ll be exploring the overall AI process and applying it to contemporary restorative justice practice and community building issues.
Opening Plenary

Leading into this year’s conference, the Florida-based Site Committee solicited input from a local victim advocacy group. The group raised concerns about the victim’s role in restorative justice and expressed a major concern that victim’s are often required to participate in restorative justice efforts. Further, other concerns were raised as to perceptions that restorative justice practices harm victims and is offender focused in nature. These issues resonate throughout victim advocate groups nationally, often a result of inexperienced programs or practitioners implementing restorative justice strategies without a proper understanding of the restorative justice concept, principles, and related practices. Further, the traditional justice system, through its various criminal and juvenile justice agencies, often unintentionally re-victimize victims as a result of our traditional justice processes. However, as many of these system agencies adopt policies and practices emphasizing victim awareness and victim services; many are exploring internalizing restorative philosophy into their respective programs, promoting practices that provide for safety, and voluntary participation of victims in the justice process. This plenary session -- through a broad range of panelists (see grid above) -- will address these concerns and perceptions and provide an overview of efforts within their respective areas that are being adopted to address the concerns of victims.
Conference Sessions

Workshop 1: Opening Plenary Follow-up Session
This session is a follow up to the opening plenary for those who wish to further explore the role of victims in a restorative justice process. It will consist of a roundtable discussion with panelists and audience participants.

Workshop 2: Restorative Values: A Description, A Meeting Place, And A Guidepost for Creative Restorative Justice – Jarem Sawatsky
This workshop will present an integrated framework of restorative values which:
• Is descriptive of the underlying often unarticulated values of restorative justice practitioners and current best practices
• Carves out a meeting place for people from diverse cultural, religious, and practical backgrounds
• Suggests guideposts which encourage the development of creative value-based restorative justice

The presenter recently returned from two and a half years in Indonesia where he was actively engaged in using restorative justice principles to intervene in interethnic and inter-religious strife which has resulted in thousands of deaths and over a million internally displaced people. The workshop will describe his work and discuss other potential applications of restorative justice to large-scale conflicts.

Workshop 4: Juvenile Victim Restitution: Lessons Learned from “Project Payback” – Gretchen Howard
An introduction to the philosophy, program components, and evaluation strategies used to effectively manage a juvenile restitution program.

Workshop 5: Restorative Justice: Principles, Theory and Practice – Bill Preston
Restorative Justice is a different way of understanding and practicing criminal justice. Crime causes injury and harm which create needs and responsibilities between all those affected by crime. The criminal justice process should be an opportunity for each of those to meet their responsibilities and receive what they need. It should, as much as possible, rely on the active participation of those affected by crime. This session will review a restorative approach to crime and justice, and describe practical ways to put restorative justice to work.

Workshop 6: Current Issue: Restorative Justice and the Death Penalty
This workshop will be a discussion and open dialogue on restorative justice and the death penalty, including public policies that would support or advance the field in this area. A VOMA board member and a practitioner, yet to be determined, will moderate the session.

The constitutional implications of restorative justice including confidentially ramifications is a research, training and publication area for me. As a former prosecutor and volunteer victim offender mediator, I have a personal understanding of the system and legal issues regarding restorative practices while maintaining sensitivity about the philosophy and practice of restorative justice.

Workshop 8: Victim Offender Mediation as a Means to Overcome Post Traumatic Stress Disorder (PTSD) -- Especially Where Mass Atrocities Have Caused the PTSD – Hans Boserup
Some of the survivors of mass atrocities suffer from other disorders such as depression and periodical or chronic signs of psychoses, etc. Some of the atrocity arenas could be South Africa, Rwanda, Bosnia, Kosovo, and the Middle East. How to set up the process? Are there alternatives like medical treatment? How to identify PTSD? What to be aware of in particular?

The objective of this workshop will be to prepare those who would consider a Restorative Justice Circle Conferencing as a means of school discipline and reentry, to prepare them to present the idea to school administrators as well as to be prepared to facilitate Circles and complete follow-up evaluations.

Workshop 10: Collaborating with Victim Services Programs – Mary Achilles/Lorraine Stutzman Amstutz
This workshop will explore the unique perspectives of victim advocacy programs and victim offender programs and provide participants with effective collaboration strategies to enhance working relationships.

Workshop 11: Current Issue: Restorative Justice and Domestic Violence – Alan Edwards
This session will be a discussion on the current issue of Domestic Violence, including public policies that would support or advance restorative justice in this area. Alan Edwards, a practitioner, and a VOMA Board member will moderate this session.
Workshop 12: Starting a Victim Offender Mediation Program – Mary Ellen Bowen/Linda Mix
This workshop highlights the essential keys and strategies in building a successful mediation program, including types of organization, types of cases, funding and development, training and community education, networking, expansion, mentoring, and other issues and concerns of participants.

Workshop 13: Perspectives and Contrasts: Kentucky and Ohio – Restorative Justice Practice
-- Linda Harvey/ Lisa Singh
Kentucky is new to restorative justice. Ohio has more experience. The presenters will show how these states contrast and how practitioners can gain insights into implementing restorative justice based programs in their unique local areas. Examples of innovative programs will be demonstrated through a community mediation/volunteer perspective.

Workshop 14: Challenges for Restorative Justice Practice in Northern Ireland – Martin McAnallen
This workshop will present the challenges inherent in establishing a Restorative ethos and practice within the Northern Ireland jurisdiction. It will illustrate some of the key stages of the journey that Restorative Justice has traveled to date, and follow with an overview of the challenges that lie ahead.

An open roundtable discussion to address issues confronting mediators and program coordinators. The presenter will provide a facilitated forum for participants to discuss issues and challenges experienced in their own programs related to the topics of: confidentiality, agency information sharing, multi-cultural and multi-language challenges, parents role in mediation, using multiple mediation models, youth mediators, liability, and community service/restorative justice programs.

Workshop 16: Restorative Justice Responses in GLBT Communities
By Board policy, VOMA is committed to specifically explore the issue of crime and violence against the gay, lesbian, bisexual, and transgender community. This workshop will help raise awareness of the issues and explore nonviolent restorative responses.

Workshop 17: Domestic Terrorism – Anne Rogers
Anne Rogers, Executive Director of the Colorado Forum on Community and Restorative Justice, was part of the Response Team for the Columbine School shootings and the Oklahoma City bombing court trials. She has also recently completed a reflection process for Colorado Response Team members who helped after the September 11 attacks. Anne will discuss what they have learned about – and propose for – restorative responses to domestic terrorism.

Workshop 18: Victim Sensitivity – Anne Seymour
This workshop will provide suggestions for influencing systems to become more sensitive to victims, the challenges of creating partnerships between advocates and “the system,” and effective ways to address the frustrations that advocates and consultants may have in doing restorative justice work.

Workshop 19: Convincing Statutory Agencies to Support Restorative Justice Initiatives – The Challenges, Constraints and Opportunities – Ken Webster
This workshop will encourage participants to consider how they can best enlist the help and support of the statutory agencies, particularly law enforcement agencies, for restorative justice initiatives. It will examine the challenges and constraints from those agencies’ perspectives whilst challenging the mindset of strategic managers within them.

Workshop 20: Restorative Justice: A Lost Gem in Kenya?
– Evans Mirieri/Hon. Justice Nicholas R. Ombija/Mrs. Josephine K. Maangi
Just like most African countries, Kenya has an informal (and almost near formal), elaborate, traditional justice system that predates colonialism. This workshop will explore the state of restorative justice in Kenya and how, as a movement, restorative justice supplements the judicial efforts of correcting harm in Kenya. Furthermore, the workshop will explore what can be done to build onto the gains made by restorative justice within the changing cultural, judicial, and economical situation in Kenya without undermining the efficacy of restorative justice.

The presenters will explore the impact of victim awareness classes on youth in a correctional facility. They will outline the program, identify techniques, and share an evaluation methodology. Outcomes and limitations, reflection on the value of the program, and open dialogue with the audience will highlight the session.

Workshop 22: Implementing Restorative Dialogue in Rural Areas – Bart Mackay/Marilyn Patterson
This workshop is designed for professionals wishing to implement Restorative Dialogue programs (victim offender mediation, group conferencing, truancy mediation, circles) in their communities. The focus will be on the challenges and obstacles faced when trying to implement restorative dialogue programs that are unique to rural areas and strategies to overcome them. The presenters will relate their experiences implementing restorative dialogue programs in rural areas in the state of Utah.
Workshop 23: Restorative Justice in Prison – Heather Burns
In this collaboration between the Center for Crime Victim Services and the Minnesota Department of Corrections, victims of crime, community members, and offenders took part in a new project conducted at the Minnesota Correctional Facility at Lino Lakes in the fall of 2001. Participants met weekly to engage in dialogue about their personal experiences with violent crime and its enormous impact on their lives. This unique form of surrogate restorative conferencing allows for a meeting between those who were involved in or harmed by similar crimes, though not involved in the same actual cases. This presentation will discuss the program model and the research findings gleaned from observation, taped sessions, and participant surveys.

Workshop 24: Why Did This Happen? Victimization and Healing: A Spiritual Perspective – Teresa Tyson
“Why?” questions are often futile. “How can I heal?” is much more helpful. The presenter will share her story of rape and recovery and explain the spiritual principles that helped her to heal. In addition, this workshop will examine the causes of violence and the process of forgiveness through brainstorming and discussion.

Workshop 25: Best Practices and Research - Bobbie Boland/David Hart
This three-hour session is designed for the exploration of the concept of best practices and research in relationship to the work of the day to day practice of restorative justice program staff. Please join a conversation exploring what research can teach us and what our practice can conclude should be the next research hypotheses.

Workshop 26: Human Growth and Development (Balance and Restorative Justice Practice: Competency Development/Human Growth and Development) – Abdus-Salaam Muhsin/Walter Drew Smith
Competency is the capacity to do something well that others value. Juvenile offenders, like other young people, need to become competent, caring individuals who are concerned for other people. Once juvenile offenders are held accountable for rectifying their behavior with their victims, the BARJ approach provides opportunities for them to belong, contribute, form close relationships, make meaningful choices, develop transferable skills, and mentor others while avoiding harmful behavior. It is not enough to develop strategies to prevent harmful behavior such as substance abuse, criminal acts and violence, or preach against behavioral problems that place youth in jeopardy. We must be equally adamant about stating and enabling goals that we wish young people to achieve: post secondary education, community involvement, civic contributions and leadership roles.

Human Growth and Development is an outgrowth of Abraham Maslow's Hierarchy of Needs: Maslow, a humanistic psychologist, believed that people are not merely controlled by mechanical forces of unconscious impulses; thus, his focus was directed towards human potential with the belief that humans strive to reach the highest level of their capabilities. The formation of Human Growth and Development Curriculum is to satisfy BARJ practices of competency development and more by increasing the young offenders emotional, moral and cognitive intelligence. The effort captured in HG&D provides the youth with tools to reach his human potential and embrace a knowledge base to approach the beneficial and avoid the harmful.

Workshop 27 – Restorative Justice in Culturally Diverse Communities in Florida
Restorative Justice practitioners living and working in the rich cultural context of Southern Florida will share their work and discuss adaptations and specific issues that address the Latin, Centro-American and Hispanic people who live there.

Workshop 28 – Listening Project – Mary Achilles/Lorraine Statzman Amstutz
Restorative justice promises to be good news to victims. But is it keeping this promise? This workshop will focus on the findings from a project where teams of victim advocates and restorative justice advocates listened to victims and advocates in seven states talk about their experience with restorative justice. The final report from that project will be presented and discussed with participants looking at how this report can impact the work of restorative justice.

Workshop 29: Forgiveness – Kathy Elton/Bev Klungervik
What role does forgiveness play in Victim Offender Mediation? What is forgiveness and how is it viewed by society? Is forgiveness a religious issue? Is remorse or an apology necessary for forgiveness to happen? What role does the mediator play (or not play) in the forgiveness process? This workshop will explore all of these questions and more in a facilitated discussion format. Join us for a lively dialogue on an important issue.

Workshop 30: Conferencing Research Project Report – Gordon Bazemore, Mara Schiff
This session will provide the results of Drs. Bazemore and Schiff’s recent study on conferencing in the United States.

TRainers AND PREsenterS
(Subject to change)

Mary Achilles, Office of the Victim Advocate, Harrisburg, Pennsylvania. She was appointed as Pennsylvania’s first statewide Victim Advocate in 1995. Jon Wilson is a mediator and Editor-in-Chief, HOPE Magazine, Maine. A magazine publisher since 1974, Jon has had an enduring interest in exploring the common ground of humanity. The first hint of what HOPE Magazine could be appeared as result of Wilson's encounter with a photographic essay in a late April, 1985 issue of Newsweek, in which a suspected Sandinista spy was shown being executed by a Contra soldier with a combat knife in the Nicaraguan jungle. This raw witness to murder sparked in Wilson a realization of -- and belief in -- the need for a magazine exploring the more fundamental realities of the human experience, while at the same time endeavoring to discover and convey the very best in humanity. Such a magazine could, in time, encourage among its readers a deeper understanding of the human condition while inspiring a sense of possibilities for dissolving differences among us and create contexts in which hope -- whether for ourselves or for the world -- can be discovered, nurtured, and sustained.

Based on Howard Zehr’s interviews with victims of violent crimes, this drama presents the challenges and triumphs of individuals coping with – and moving through – violent tragedies.

Designed to provide a kinetic counterpart to the photographic and written portraits in Zehr’s book Transcending: Reflections of Crime Victims, “A Body in Motion” communicates the survivors’ complex and varied responses to the tragic events and their journeys toward transcendence.

With great strength and courage, each of these human beings displays an individual, significant response to a life changing moment.
